EDITION 5.2 AUGUST – SEPTEMBER 2008 - PUSHPAPURI

Villa Pushpapuri is a large, pavilion-style villa with the four bedrooms and the living/dining room spaced separately on a 1850m² piece of land. The garden area occupies most of the beach side with mature coconut trees towering above, and a 20 metre infinity pool being the central focal point before the beach. A bar and bale gazebo are placed at each end of the pool. Unfortunately, the bar knock out a large slice of the beach view but of course one can always move one's chair. There's been no expense spared in the materials chosen in building the villa with a predominance of timber and natural stone used throughout. The bedrooms are complete with four-poster beds and the ultimate luxury fittings; flat screen satellite TV, DVD player, with outdoor bathroom en-suites including Jacuzzis in the two master bedrooms.

Service is always the key in any luxury villa and Pushpapuri doesn't disappoint. The full-time staff are courteous and attentive and on hand for your every need. We were informed on our arrival that we had to order groceries, which staff would buy at the local market for the chef to make our meals. A simple menu is on hand and the idea of buying your own groceries is perfect if one was arriving with a full family or two, with which Pushpapuri is ideally suited. With the Sanur By-Pass road not far away, and Sanur itself only in fact 10 minutes drive, there are plenty of outside options to consider too.

Villa Pushpapuri is a great option for many reasons. The accessibility to all areas of Bali from the villa is just about unsurpassable. The new By-Pass Roads gets you to Candidasa, Ubud, and back to Sanur and Seminyak in a flash. However, with the views, excellent design and lay-out of Pushpapuri there's also no need to go anywhere if you are looking for a relaxing beachside holiday.
